WHAT THE PRESS THINKS OF WILSON'S ADDRESS

BRITISH OPINION

London, Jan. 23.-Mindful of the error into which they were drawn on President Wilson's peace note by overhastiness, British editors today were generally cautious in their attempts to analyze and interpret the presient's speech in the senate. They evidently feared a possible misconstruction on his remarks.

Most of the comment, how ever, hinged on the American executive's use of the term "neace without victory." (Continued On Page Six)

D-WINTER CLEARANCE SAL A BIG SUCCESS

AND WE THANK YOU KINDLY FOR THE CO-OPERATION ACCORDED US.

The eager buyers have crowded our store Friday and Saturday and helped themselves to real buying opportunities with no restriction whatsoever placed on any item, and the results were that some of the bargains were snatched up in a hurry by early shoppers. To accommodate our patrons we have added new attractive offerings every hour in the day until our supply was nearly exhausted and even then we have put no restriction in order to have as many fully satisfied enstoners as we could.

AND NOW TO MAKE THIS WEEK JUST AS INTERESTING

We shall place special lots in our basement every day of our regular stock of our main floor at such figures that you cannot resist but buy plenty.

Consider that merchandise is advancing rapidly in price and the styles we offer are absolutely good and up to date.

Do not wonder why we do that. It's merely to introduce our Bargain Basement which will be operated from now on steadily and extra help to assist "Basement Shoppers" at all times.

Our buyer will soon leave for New York to buy real bargains for the busement offerings and to get real values we must buy them in big lots and in order to be in a position to handle big lots we must clear our racks of all merchandise on hand possible, and so you have the situation clear before you and you'll wonder no longer why we are almost giving merchandise away when everything is so high and scarce.

Now Read These Items Carefully

A CENTURY'S GROWTH

The practice of saving in this country is just a hundred years old. May be there were thrifty people before then, who saw and observed the wisdom of laying by something for the inevitable rainy day, but they didn't save much in the money of the realm, because that was about the scantiest of all commodities. We say then saving, as a custom, began a hundred years ago because with the ending of 1916 the two eldest and first savings banks in America rounded out each an even century of existence. These two banks are the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society and the Boston Provident Savings Institution. There seems to be no record accessible of the savings these institutions guarded away back in 1816, but approximate figures of advance since their founding are at hand. From two the savings institutions have grown and now in existence 2,159, not including national and state banks, nor building and loan associations, numbeing more than five times as many, and the government itself.
The exclusive savings institutions have ten million depositors with $4,700,000,000 in savings; with something like twice that number in the banks and companies with savings over another four billion. Of these the building associations have three million members with deposits amounting to about a billion, five hundred million dollars

Add to all this the further fact that America leads the world in life insurance there doesn't seem that our jihes at ourselves that we are the most profligate people on earth is not altogether justified by conditions. Still there is much room for improvement and if we ware all as prindent as many of us are the almost inconceivable swings made would be more than doubled in a decade. May be they will anyway and the habit of saving is making splendid pro-

THE BIG SHOW COMING

Having swapped felicitations with each other for three or four days the cohorts arraying against Demon Rum feel quite "peert" and now are planning to bring Billy Sunday, Billy Bryan and Teddy Rocewelt into the state to lead the mighty assaults that are going to be made upon the mighty bulwarks of the enemy, this year.

This trie would surely add transient gaiety to the festive occasion. No such combination has ever appeared concerted before and the like could be obtained in no other trinity. Sunday and Bryan make some team, indeed, still we would naturally expect them to pair in such work as their minds and tongues are habituated that way to a considerable extent, but think of making a spiked team with them and Roosevelt in the lead. Bryan and Roosevelt, the poles in politics, peace and personality, pulling the same load, not in oppomits, but in the same direction. No other nation, no other time, no other cause could bring such a culmination. For that is what it is and nothing less, a culmination, contrariety and opposition meeting, not in conflict and crash, but merging and converging in a startling and powerful unity. Aye, men and brethren, there will be some times in old Ohio, this year of grace. Why we may even expect to see the dauntless Roosevelt charging down on Cincinnati, the esteemed impregnable fortress of Demon Rum and riding roughshod, though it is hardly to be expected, triumphantly over her.

A voice from the tombs, 'way down in Georgia, is heard monning that if somebody besides Hughes had been nominated the Republicans would have won. We don't bolieve it. Hughes got all the votes of the partisans of his party, who would have roted for any Republican, and the rest joined with us other patriots in electing Woodrow.

People who make the greatest ado about the high cost of necessities, never bat an eye over the high cost of their wasteful and extravagant luxuries. We're all built that way. What we must have we want cheap; what we buy to gratify our vanity we grab for at any price.-Gallipolis Tribune.

Alas! Another war calamity! The Missouri mule may lose his voice. The nervous French have found a way to make him keep still, under pretense that his far-reaching notes hetray them to the Germans. The French horse doctors operate on his nostrils, and the voice is no more. Mute and inglorious, the army mule now does his bit in silence, doubtless much puzzled over the change.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE PORTSMOUTH DAILY TIMES

GOING TO THE PEOPLE

Alfred C. Bedford, the new president of the Standard Oil company, the parent and indirect owner of the most complete and profitable trust ever formed, has inaugurated a new policy in the conduct of its affairs, a most startling one, considering what it has been heretofore. No longer will there he intense secrecy enshrouding the business and operations of the company. Instead its affairs will be laid before the public as if set down in an open book.

In a general way Standard Oil has been a good trust. It has cheapened prices, as a rule; it has been enterprising and has spent countless millions in discovering and developing bi-products; it has never been its practice to sell the poorest thing at the highest price, but the best at the lowest; it has put a premium on both brains and industry by giving good pay. It has been altogether misunderstood and generally maligned and condemned, because it was so all pervading and so secretive, that it became accepted as the synonym for all that was evil and debasing in politics and government, while, perhaps, the worst that could be frightfully said of it was it was ruthlessly crushing and wreeking competition. In these latter years it seems to have become less ferocious, but you can't tell as to that. It has so many forms and ramifications since it was judicially discolved that there is no distinguishing what it is or isu't.

It will find that its new policy of publicity will relieve it, in the course of time, of much of the obloquy and prejudice entertained against it. Humanity fears and hates the unknown. It tolerates mything, even the worst, when it grows familiar with it.

Mystery, deep profound and, wear fear impenetrable, surrounds the disappearance of that "eight feet, five inches of water in the reservoir." Wake up Director Ralph and do some more reporting. Inderstand too that we are happy in the thought that the last disappearance of the water left no such traces behind it as on that previous occasion when it escaped, evacuated, fled, vanished, rore coured away. Which is one way of saying there is always something to be thankful for if you can only find it-though you can't my more than you can how that "eight feet, five inches" of Ralph's

BRITISH OPINION

The papers owned by Lord Mortheride insisted that there cannot be a drawn war between the spirit with which the allies are animated on the one side, and on the other the spirit of Prussian militarism.

The Morning Post answered Wilson's assumption that neither side desires victory by pointing out sections of the kaiser's recent proclamations of the kaisers recent procumations and letters in which he emphasized Germany's determination for a complete victory.

As a whole, the liberal press ap-planded the lofty principles apparent in the president's statement, but balked at some of the applications thereof, notably the reference to freedom of the seas.
The general impression among both press and public seems to be that the speech was intended neither pro-ally nor pro-German-but rather for American consumption.

Columbus, O., Jan. 23.—A proposal to submit woman suffrage to a state-wide vote next November was introduced through a reso lution in the senate today, by Senator Holden, Morrow county. The vote would be on amending the Ohio constitution.

Presidential suffrage advocates pointed out that this resolution is simply another effort to side track the presidential suffrage bills now pending in the house. The Holden resolution requires three fifths vote of both houses.

On this date, the bids will be opened and the horses will be sold to the highest responsible bidder.

The thrills of watching the galloping teams dashing down the streets to the accompaniment of the harsh din of the fire bells is no more. It is only another experlence which this generation will explain to coming generations. The motor demon has taken the place of the horses in Portsmouth. It has come to stay and on March the first the old horses, that had dragged the fire fighting apparatus through the streets of Portsmouth for the past several years, must go.

THE NAVAL ARMOR PLANT

Permannth, Ironton and Huntington are the three cities of this ediate section of the Ohio valley that are seeking the location of the federal naval armor plant. All are going to make the best prestion of their advantages for such location they possibly can, we believe any two will hope that if they can not win the other

The mayal plant is a prize worth striving for in this broad and rous spirit. Securing its location will not only be tremendous etts to the growth and prosperity of the city, but beneficial to s large scope of territory. For the plant is to be an enormous If will require at least two hundred acres for a site, its seller and at the beginning of its operation will require somewhere three and four thousand men, meet skilled workers and it is expected the number of these will be steadily increased.

There is no use to give here our conception as to what superior ments Portsmouth has to offer for location; our thought is now there should be neither hesitation nor division in her effort as seems the plant. Putting the whole community desire and spirit back of an undertaking of this sort is one of the best reasons for

HIS HONORABLE STAND

We have read much that was unpleasant, much that was derogathey of him, about Governor Hatfield, who is about to retire as governor of West Virginia, so it is deeply gratifying, by way of contradiction, that he raises himself immeasurably in estimation by taking high and honorable ground in the matter of the thirteen million seller debt the supreme court of the United States has decreed his stato owes Virginia.

We have no interest in the debt, other than that it is a public sure of novel interest, the first of its exact kind ever presented to a court, and West Virginia is Ohio's goodly and esteemed neighbot. The litigation between the two commonwealths grew out of the creation of West Virginia, then a part of Virginia, into a separate state as an incident of the civil war. Virginia claimed there were a debt created before the separation for which West Virginia was obligated to an equitable proportion and certain public assets absorbed by the latter for which she should be compensated. This view was upheld by the supreme court. Since the rendering of the judgment West Virginia has been totally concerned as to how she could set it aside or avoid it, but Governor Hatfield is convinced the time for dallying with and evading a public obligation is altogether past and the legislature should carnestly and seriously take up the task of solving how it should be met. In plain, forceful language he has just addressed the body to that effect. We admire his position. It seems to us that a state, which would exert every artifice to escape payment of a debt established against it by the law, of which it is the incarnation, is not setting a wholesome example in. honesty and integrity to its citizenry, and it is time for West Virginia to quit her evasion and shuffling.

Two whole weeks gone by and our good ex-young governor been't succeeded in breaking into print yet. There is a good deal in the place making the noise.

So much depends on how you look at it. A Detroit councilman would have woman given all credit for her silent war against the high cost of living. She has shortened her attire at the neck and the heels and the wintry blast stay her not thereat. Think how much higher drygoods might have soured had she wavered in her

One would scarce suspect it, but George W. Perkins does seem bent on becoming champion political joker. As a decoy duck he had a bit of success, but joking's different.

Professor Taft is much annoyed at the congressional leak inquiry and regards it as a baseless piece of baseless scandal that seem to be inevitable to public life and affairs. The professor will find many feel and agree with him.

Our good young ex-governor declared the state "over-officered." The important thing about that is that he did not make the discovery until three ticks of the watch before he became the ex-good.

May be some of us veteran renters might furnish the police with a clue as to how those impounded "eight-feet-five-inches" roamed silently away, if properly approached.

Just like old times to read "no pressure and no water on the hilltops."

Some fellows always trying to make more trouble for us. Here's one around already wanting us to tell him how many cable inches there were in that "eight-feet-five inches" of water in the reservoir, that vacated overnight without leaving a trace as to where they had appeared. We are not going to oblige him, we are bothered enough in trying to get a clue to a most marvelous exit.

May be an airship line from Portsmouth to South Portsmouth might prove profitable, on occasions.

HIS PLACE IN THE SUN

THE LESSER REASON

A Washington disputch says the Republicans will make no effort to organize the house, because it would be to their party advuntage to give the Democrats full control and responsibility for all legislation.

One wonders how much truth there can be in this statement. Ordinarily partisans do not pass up chance to secure honors and johs without a struggle. They hanker keenest after the bounties of the past rather than the building of opportunities for the future. If we get down to the actual analysis it will be found election results do not, as often as one case in a thousand, turn upon what a egislative body does or does not to. We have that vividly illustrated in the last general election. It stands conceded that never did any other congress pass such important and beneficial lawsas the one whose successor was to be then chosen, but scant attention was given to that feature in the campaign, the sole determining of which rested upon the personality of Wilson, prosperity and the maintenance of peace. With any one of these conditions absent the Democrats would never have won a victory.

It would be poor statesmanship, it would be putting the lesser eason above the greater, from a patriotic standpoint, for the Republicans to turn over the running of congress to Democrats, just, to help their party; it would be poor tactics from a partisan stand-We have no idea that the Republican congressmen meditate point. any such concession.

Cheer up. A returning traveler brings in the news that there is no snow at all in the mountains beyond Charleston, and there has been none for more than a week.

Now, really, it might have been a great deal worse, and Sunday it looked more than trifle like we were in for the worst.

THE NAVAL ARMOR PLANT

Portsmouth, Ironton and Huntington are the three cities of this immediate section of the Ohio valley that are seeking the location of the federal naval armor plant. All are going to make the best presentation of their advantages for such location they possibly can, and we believe any two will hope that if they can not win the other

The naval plant is a prize worth striving for in this broad and generous spirit. Securing its location will not only be tremendous impetus to the growth and prosperity of the city, but beneficial to a large scope of territory. For the plant is to be an enormous one. It will require at least two hundred acres for a site, its building and equipment will cost approximately eleven million dollars and at the beginning of its operation will require somewhere between three and four thousand men, most skilled workers and it is expected the number of these will be steadily increased.

There is no use to give here our conception as to what superior inducements Portsmouth has to offer for location, our thought is just now there should be neither hesitation nor division in her effort to secure the plant. Putting the whole community desire and spirit back of an undertaking of this sort is one of the hest reasons for

We have read much that was unpleasant, much that was derogatory of him, about Governor Hatfield, who is about to retire as governor of West Virginia, so it is deeply gratifying, by way of contradiction, that he raises himself immeasurably in estimation by taking high and honorable ground in the matter of the thirteen million dollar debt the supreme court of the United States has decreed his state owes Virginia.

We have no interest in the debt, other than that it is a public measure of novel interest, the first of its exact kind ever presented to a court, and West Virginia is Ohio's goodly and esteemed neighbor. The litigation between the two commonwealths grew out of the creation of West Virginia, then a part of Virginia, into a separate state as an incident of the civil war. Virginia claimed there were a debt created before the separation for which West Virginia was obligated to an equitable proportion and certain public assets absorbed by the latter for which she should be compensated. This view was upheld by the supreme court. Since the rendering of the judgment West Virginia has been totally concerned as to how she could set it aside or avoid it, but Governor Hatfield is convinced the time for dailying with and evading a public obligation is altogether past and the legislature should carnestly and seriously take up the task of solving how it should be met. In plain, forceful language he has just addressed the body to that effect. We admire his position. It seems to us that a state, which would exert every artifice to escape payment of a debt established against it by the law, of which it is the incarnation, is not setting a wholesome example in honesty and integrity to its citizenry, and it is time for West Virginia to quit her evasion and shuffling.

Two whole weeks gone by and our good ex-young governor hasn't succeeded in breaking into print yet. There is a good deal in the place making the noise.

So much depends on how you look at it. A Detroit conneilman would have woman given all credit for her silent war against the high cost of living. She has shortened her attire at the neck and the heels and the wintry blast stay her not thereat. Think how much higher drygoods might have soared had she wavered in her heroic fight.

One would scarce suspect it, but George W. Perkins does seem bent on becoming champion political joker. As a decoy duck he had a bit of success, but joking's different.

Professor Taft is much annoyed at the congressional leak in quiry and regards it as a buscless piece of baseless scandal that seem to be inevitable to public life and affairs. The professor will find many feel and agree with him.

Our good young ex-governor declared the state "over-officered." The important thing about that is that he did not make the discovery until three ticks of the watch before he became the ex-good.

May be some of us veteran renters might furnish the police with a clue as to how those impounded "eight-feet-five-inches" rouncd silently away, if properly approached.

Just like old times to read "no pressure and no water on the Lilltons.

Some fellows always trying to make more trouble for us. Here's one around already wanting us to tell him how many cubic inches there were in that "eight-feet-five inches" of water in the reservoir, that vacated overnight without leaving a trace as to where they had appeared. We are not going to oblige him, we are bothered enough m trying to get a clue to a most marvelous exit.

May be an airship line from Portsmouth to South Portsmouth might prove profitable, on occasions.

THE LESSER REASON

A Washington dispatch suys the Ropublicans will make no efert to organize the house, because it would be to their party advantage to give the Democrats full control and responsibility for all legislation.

One wonders how much truth there can be in this statement. Ordinarily partisans do not pass up chance to secure honors and jobs without a struggle. They hanker keenest after the bounties of the past rather than the building of opportunities for the future. If we get down to the actual analysis it will be found election results do not, as often as one case in a thousand, turn upon what a egislative body does or does not to. We have that vividly illustrated in the last general election. It stands conceded that never did any other congress pass such important and beneficial laws as the one whose successor was to be then chosen, but scant attention was given to that feature in the campaign, the sole determining of which rested upon the personality of Wilson, prosperity and the maintenance of peace. With any one of these conditions bsent the Democrats would never have won a victory.

It would be poor statesmanship, it would be putting the lesser eason above the greater, from a patriotic standpoint, for the Republicans to turn over the running of congress to Democrats, just to help their party; it would be poor tactics from a partisan standpoint. We have no idea that the Republican congressmen meditate any such concession.

Cheer up. A returning traveler brings in the news that there is no snow at all in the mountains beyond Charleston, and there has been none for more than a week.

Now, really, it might have been a great deal worse, and Sunlay it looked more than trifle like we were in for the worst.
